

“...a..5,6,7,8!”

Eight vocal tips to preserve your voice while teaching in a studio setting.

In this workshop you will learn ways to set yourself up for vocal health while you are teaching in a studio setting. If you find yourself vocally fatigued at the end of an hour class and you still have three more classes to teach, this workshop is for you!

I will address vocal technique and breath management along with environmental tips to maintain a healthy voice and avoid vocal issues.

Jennifer Madsen has an over 40-year history as vocal teacher and coach. As a dancer and choreographer who has spent many years teaching movement, she understands the struggle of being heard in less than hospitable environments for vocal health.

Jennifer studied for over 15 years with Elizabeth Jones Boswell, Master Pilates Teacher, where together, with Elizabeth’s deep understanding of the body and Jennifer’s understanding of the voice, they created a physical conditioning protocol for Vocalists using Pilates based movement and exercises.

Jennifer Madsen recently released another new vocal LP this past January of 2023 “Kick Off the Covers” that can be heard on all of your streaming services. She currently teaches on the vocal faculty at Snow College’s Horne School of Music where she works as a director and vocal teacher with vocalist working on contemporary, musical theatre and jazz stylizing.

Jennifer is aligned with Kari Margolis and The Margolis Method as an instructor where she presents live workshops and video online courses entitled “The Performative Singer.” She collaborates with Americana Singer Songwriter, Chris Pierce in presenting “Songs That Make a Difference” workshops and showcases for singer/songwriters. Jennifer Madsen also serves on the committee for the Jazz Education Network’s JENerations Jazz Festival held every year.